Registered Charity Status

Information is compiled from the Government of Canada, the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) and the BC Centre for Social Enterprise.

A registered charity may take part in some political activities as a way of furthering its charitable purpose(s). However, charities do not have complete freedom to support any cause they like (restrictions on expenditures and time spent). Special legal rules apply to charities because of their charitable and tax statuses.

A charity's activities can be divided into three separate types:

- prohibited activities
- political activities
- charitable activities

A charity may not take part in an illegal activity or a partisan political activity. A partisan political activity is one that involves direct or indirect support of, or opposition to, any political party or candidate for public office.

When a political party or candidate for public office supports a policy that is also supported by a charity, the charity is not prevented from promoting this policy. However, a charity in this situation must not directly or indirectly support the political party or candidate for public office. This means that a charity may make the public aware of its position on an issue provided:

- it does not explicitly connect its views to any political party or candidate for public office
- the issue is connected to its purposes
- its views are based on a well-reasoned position
- public awareness campaigns do not become the charity's primary activity

In addition, a charity in this situation is also subject to the restrictions this guidance places on non-partisan political activity, public awareness campaigns and communications with an elected representative or public official.

A charity may provide information to its supporters or the public on how all the Members of Parliament or the legislature of a province, territory or municipal council voted on an issue connected with the charity's purpose. However, a charity must not single out the voting pattern on an issue of any one elected representative or political party.

Additional prohibited activities include:

- Supporting an election candidate in the charity's newsletter
- Distributing leaflets highlighting lack of government support for charity goals
- Preparing dinner for campaign organizers of a political party
- Inviting competing election candidates to speak at separate events

A charity may take part in political activities if they are non-partisan and connected and subordinate to the charity's purposes. An activity is political if a charity:

- explicitly communicates a call to political action (that is, encourages the public to contact an elected representative or public official and urges them to retain, oppose, or change the law, policy, or decision of any level of government in Canada or a foreign country)
- explicitly communicates to the public that the law, policy, or decision of any level of government in Canada or a foreign country should be retained (if the retention of the law, policy or decision is being reconsidered by a government), opposed, or changed
- explicitly indicates in its materials (whether internal or external) that the intention of the activity is to incite, or organize to put pressure on, an elected representative or public official to retain, oppose, or change the law, policy, or decision of any level of government in Canada or a foreign country

Compliance concerns for registered charities include:

1. Failure to file a T3010 Registered Charity Information Return every year.
2. Issuing incorrect official donation receipts or issuing donation receipts in exchange for services
3. Acting outside of legal objects (i.e. our purpose)
4. Gifts to non-qualified donees (i.e. can not issue official donation receipts for Income Tax purposes)
5. Employment issues
6. Failing to keep adequate books and records
7. Involvement in unrelated business activities
8. Mishandling of an audit (CRA conducts 800 audits per year of registered charities)
9. Gift restrictions (If a charity accepts a gift with a restriction on it the charity needs to comply with the restriction)
10. Failing to inform the Charities Directorate of any changes to the charity's mode of operation or legal structure

In the last 10 years, 315 charities in Canada have had their registered charity status revoked as a result of an audit. (This doesn't include revocation that was voluntary or as a result of failing to file returns). This number includes 34 charities in British Columbia.

If registration is revoked the charity must pay a 100% tax on the value of its assets i.e. a revocation tax.
